Evaluation Coach
beth@pieorg.org

Beth is an experienced evaluator who brings a broad background in education, international development and immigrant and refugee services. She has worked in a variety of nonprofit settings leading programs and staff to develop their evaluation systems, strengthen their skills, and become comfortable using data. As an adjunct at DePaul University, she further contributes to evaluation skills development by teaching master level students.

Much of her work has been in the education sector, both in international settings and in Chicago, with an emphasis in early childhood development. Contributing to evaluation, research and direct implementation of education programs with diverse students has spurred her passion for better ensuring equitable opportunities for children in education.

Working in international development and in the field of refugees and migration in several countries globally has given Beth new perspectives on how to adapt evaluation practices to best meet a particular need and context. She believes in meeting people where they are at, understanding their perspective and need, and supporting in relevant ways to move the work to the next level.

Beth earned her B.S. in Early Childhood Education from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. She earned a Master of Science in Migration, Mobility and Development from the University of London, School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS). After several years working abroad, Beth moved back to the Chicagoland area in 2015 and has been rediscovering the city and surrounding areas since then.
