

Leanne Kallemeyn, Ph.D.

Leanne Kallemeyn, Ph.D., is Associate Professor in the Research Methodology at Loyola University Chicago's School of Education. She has been the principal investigator of multiple evaluation projects in education. Her scholarship focuses on how practitioners, particularly teacher and school administrators, use (and do not use) data and evidence in their daily routines. She uses this knowledge to build evaluation capacity in schools and non-profit organizations. She mentors graduate students and teaches courses in program evaluation, qualitative methodology, and mixed-methodology.

Leanne has a Bachelor of Arts in Psychology from Calvin College, and a M.Ed. and Ph.D. in Educational Psychology from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.
